

SLAVE AUCTION PROVIDES PROFIT AND EDUCATION

In April the seniors put on the annual slave auction. Each year the assembly must be educational for everyone as well as profitable for the seniors.

This year the seniors helped the students learn the human bone structure. Each prospective slave showed a bone and Professor Auctioneer Roger Berry explained the bone. He also prompted the students to raise their bids.

Some seniors appeared alone while others were auctioned in pairs. A few teachers joined the fun of being a slave for the day. Some of the tasks given the slaves were cleaning lockers, carrying books or lunch trays, begging for pennies and making public declarations denouncing the Senior Class. At 2:45 the slaves were liberated. The seniors netted 80 dollars for the hour assembly.

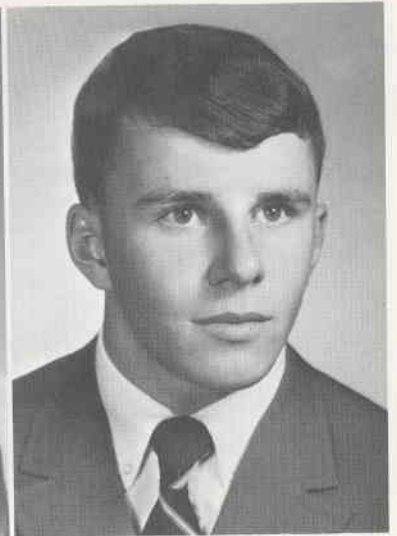

Steven Allen Swan

Pete Morris sneaks a nap after serving his time as a senior slave for a day.

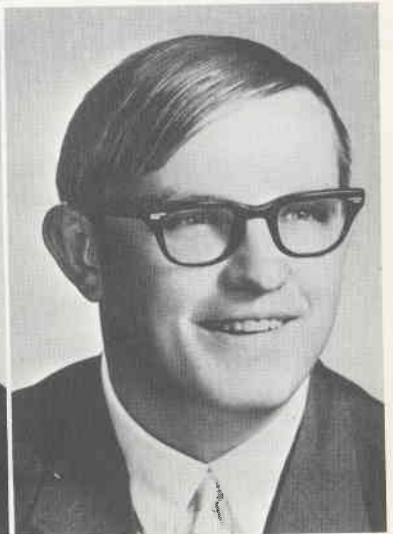

Brenda Josephine Tews

Dennis Felix Theroux

Daniel Kenneth Vance

Leroy Gale Ward