There's no place like home—Shawn Gram sits in a daze, daydreaming about being at home, asleep in his bed.

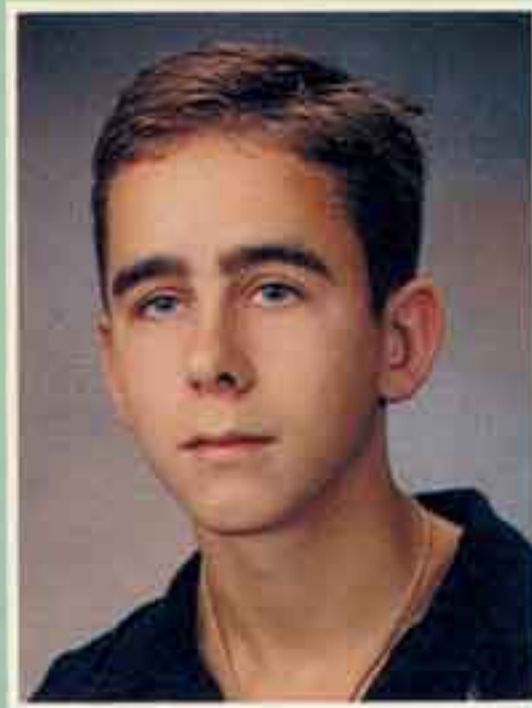

So what's the answer?—Like all honest students at this high school, James Moots confers with a classmate just to "check" his work. This is a talent that many have mastered, the art of "answer sharing." It can't be that bad: Mr. Bright encourages it!

I'm confused—Emma Bambery dives head-first into the age of technology as computer wizard Ben Pfaff monitors her with watchful eyes and listenful ears.
