

Matt Cowdrey

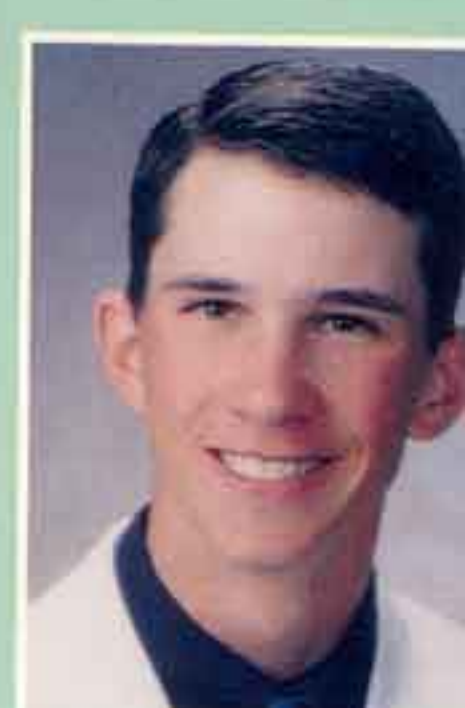

Curtis Dalman

Matthew Dodson

Geoffrey Doorn

Benard Dorer

United We Stand

Distorted misconceptions are forgotten as we discover new priorities and look back and laugh

The class of 1997 is leaving with a sense of pride and unity. We have seen three classes leave before us, and now that it is our turn, we can look behind and remember our feelings of past upperclassmen, and also look ahead to how the underclassmen will remember us. Some of us have grown up over the past four years, and some of us feel no different at all. When we were freshmen, we remember the seniors in different ways: cruel, over-powering, or even noble. We looked up to their experience, and yet feared them. Through all of this, our class has remained united. We get along well together, and we have made many friendships in younger classes. Through the past thirteen years, we have lost and gained new classmates, all the while making friends. As we graduate, we would like to be remembered fondly, by the students and the staff, as the class of 1997.

• Sherrie Sebrell

Women in uniform—The senior girls have a strong bond that is apparent when they are together. At the top of the heap (finally!), they set a good example for those that are to follow.

The East Side—Notorious prankster Nick Vartanian sits with his gang as they plan a big rumble at the Panther's Den. These guys are obviously a close-knit clan as they sit at Spirit Games and cheer.

Robert Elliott

Derek Estrada

Denise Farnham

Elizabeth Fischer

Christopher Fizzell