

One of the major activities of the 1967 Senior class was the Valentine Ball. Much planning and preparation was required. A series of bad storms created some difficulties, but many of the class members were able to attend. Although classmates participated in many other activities--both academic and co-curricular--dances were a favorite pastime.

A co-curricular activity which depended almost entirely on senior participants was Debate. In the upper right-hand corner of the next page, the Varsity Negative Team, José Rios and Davis Showers, are shown as they prepare for a contest. The Ovid-Elsie Debate Team had the honor of being the first co-curricular and interscholastic activity to complete a winning season.
