

Seniors Reminisce

Our senior class can really be proud as we look back to October and the Homecoming that we dominated. First, our powder puff football team won, making two years in a row. Then there was the sprit wall contest that our class of 1983 won every year that we were in high school. Of course no one will forget that we were the first class ever to win the tug-of-war contest four years in a row. The seniors of '83 also took the float contest—in more ways than one!

After the excitement of Homecoming, the class of '83 got back into the "old grind" with our only required classes; government and Mr. Wilcox, with our realistic mock trials, and economics with Mr. Slicer, a class that gives a small sample of what the "real world" is like. In these classes, the seniors also do what is termed "seniors also do what is termed "senior stuff" by underclassmen. Examples of this are: ordering graduation announcements, senior keys, and voting on the color of caps and gowns.

In the early spring we had a very serious senioritis epidemic. Some relief came out in the form of a massive toilet papering job done on Mrs. Rolfe's room. Another small satisfaction came from listening to representatives from colleges talk about their schools. We also had several assemblies helping us with career planning and job interviews. Still, some had to migrate to a warmer climate for a week as a means of temporary relief. Others spent spring break lounging around the house, watching the "soaps", working extra hours, or shopping.

After spring break, the time passed swiftly. Sadie Hawkins week, the NHS blood drive, senior tea, and Prom were a few of the special events. All along was the thought of June 5 and the thought of graduation day. When the day arrived, we had a collection of memories of special people and events that would last the rest of our lives.

Mark Albers
Kimberly Anderson
Louis Anderson
Brian Andrus

Kimberly Andrus
Michelle Andrus
Estella Arias
Deborah Armstrong

Maureen Asher
Marie Badeaux
Paul Barks
Sharon Barnes

