Helping Out

Preparing for the future is what this year's seniors have been doing all their life. Finally, the time has come for them to enter the real world. Decisions have to be made. Questions come up such as: "Am I going to college?" or "Do I try and start out working right away?" Either way, one needs to know how to properly present oneself. In order to aid the seniors, the counselors here at St. Johns High School call in numerous business people of the community to give work interviews to the seniors. Amy Moore stated, "It was really helpful having an interview because I've never had one before." John Werbish (shown in the picture) also thought it was worth the time doing it. The time has finally come for the seniors to step out into the world and the counselors have made it one step easier in preparing for the seniors' future.
