

Alison Dollarhite
Angela Dollarhite
John Douglas
Steven Downing

Tabitha Dunning
Kimberly Eckert
Chuck Eldridge
Rory Elsea

Aimee Fedewa
Michael Feldpausch
Dale Feldpausch
Douglas Fenby

Experience

Jobs Promote Work Habits

Mopping the floor, flipping burgers, waiting on customers, and doing paper work. These are a few of the many tasks that students do on part-time jobs.

Why do students work? Some work to earn money for college, clothes, car payments, or just for recreation. On the other hand, some students work at a job that will give them experience to accomplish their future career goals. "I enjoy being a nurse's aid because I plan on being a nurse. I think this experience will help me in the future," said junior Heidi Higgins.

Some students learn important skills through school that help them get jobs. Senior Rick Smith is the lighting technician for outside school organizations. Sometimes it is hard for students to keep up on school work and have a part-time job. Some parents frown on their teenagers having a job. They feel that working can come later, and that school and extra-curricular activities are more important at this point. "My homework suffers a lot when I work. I do not have enough time to do my school work as well as I should sometimes," said senior Jill Smith.

However, there are parents who feel that having a part-time job is important. "I feel that it teaches teenagers responsibility and how to manage their time and money better," said senior Tricia Russell's mother.

Marilee Smith