

Kristen VanBurger
Davenport
Lori Van De Creek
CCISD
Lori Vandervest
MSU
Frances VanZee
LCC

Sheryl Voisinet
U of M
Joel Waddington
Michigan Tech.
Michelle Wadell
MSU
Danell Walling
CMU

Trisha Walling
work
Todd Ward
LCC
Karen Weber
LCC
Richard Western College

Women And Unique Careers By Wendy Cocco

Don't be surprised guys if you find women wanting your job. Many women are choosing typical "male" occupations.

There are several reasons why women choose untraditional careers.

"There are more opportunities, jobs, satisfaction, and money in careers which women used to be banned from," said Senior Kari Schwerin.

Surprisingly, there are some guys who really do think it is great for women with these unique careers.

"To truly believe in equality among the sexes. We must overcome such trivial stereotypes instilled in our society by past generations," said Senior Matt Delevan.

A few men are not intimidated by women choosing any career. Others are a little less generous.

"I believe it's good that women are now broadening their skills for different careers. I also think that women should know where not to put their interests or skills. For example, the front line of a war, or in the cockpit of a fighter jet," said Senior Eric Kimmel.

"I think it's great for women to select any career they are interested in. Neither men nor women should have limits," said Missy Woodhams.

Regardless of how it may be viewed, women are seeking unusual careers and discovering what their true talents and interests.