

Keeping in touch

One of the biggest concerns of graduating seniors is whether or not they will see their friends after graduation. Seniors Karen McDonald and

Kelly Powelson hope not to lose touch after they go to college. Both will be busy playing volleyball, but will still try to find time to see each other. Photo by Jim Lemay

Once the 2:31 bell rings on May 28, there will be no more talking in the halls or hanging out at lunch for the seniors. How then will they stay in touch after they go on to college, to work or the military?

Many will keep in touch with others anyway they can.

"I will call them whenever time permits and I plan to visit some of my friends probably on my breaks from college," said Senior Raymond Garcia.

"I plan on keeping in touch with my friends by going to visit them on weekends and during winter and spring break," said Senior Andy Murray.

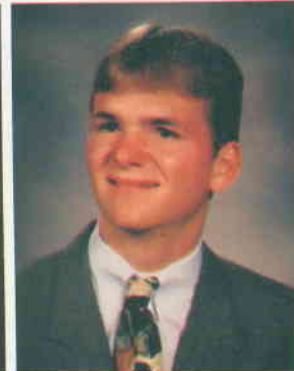

Many feel that after graduation, when everyone goes away, that the fun times went with them.

"In high school, you've spent so much time with them, doing fun things. But in college, they are no longer part of your everyday life, so you begin to lose touch and it seems like the good times are over with," said Senior Kyle Myers.

Even though everyone goes their own way, many will stay in touch with each other. Sara McLaren

Alison Whitford
Ryan Whitmore
Erica Williams
Jenny Wilson

Jeremy Winsor
Chad Wiseman
Ann Witgen
Anne Witt