"Not that long ago, in a galaxy not that far away, there stood a young Jedi Knight who was ready to start his journey and make his mark in Jedi history. He had experienced many battles and gained much wisdom from the likes of Bart Simpson and Indiana Jones, all while just a Padawan learner. He had come to understand that it is much more honorable to defeat your enemies with a joke or a laugh than with a lightsaber. The force was very strong with this one.

We understand that he had no choice but to leave us. He was ready to embark on his journey, and we will miss him terribly. However, he left us with the thought that we should not fear our mortality, for there will be a day when we will reunite and Master Jedi Nick will tell us of all his glorious battles. I personally can't wait for that day."
