Rehmann's Mens Wear - First Store

The Origin of Rehmann's Men's and Boy's Wear in St. Johns

In 1929, the Al Rehmann family all huddled into Al Rehmann's 1928, 4-door Chevy and started on a trip from Zilwaukee, Michigan, to a destination of Chicago. Leaving at 12 midnight, Dad Al Rehmann with Mother Elizabeth and the five kids were nearing Ovid-Elsie country road (as the new pavement was laid down on M-21 between St. Johns & Owosso) when they had a breakdown. When talking with the dealer, Herm Pohl of Pohl Brothers, about the repair to the car, they told him they did not have the $38.00 to pay for the work right then. They struck a deal and left Al's watch for Herm to hold until they returned. Upon returning the following week, they were talking with Herm and mentioned that they were tailors. He said that St. Johns needed a tailor and proceeded to take them to see Mr. Luecht at the St. Johns National Bank. Another deal was struck and Mr. Luecht offered the north part of the bank building for Al and Elizabeth to set up business as Rehmann's Clothiers with the tailors upstairs and the store below.

(As related by Robert Rehmann, grandson of Al and Elizabeth)

Downtown St. Johns, Michigan By John Rehmann

Robert Rehmann also provided to Clinton Co. Trails his father's, John Rehmann's, manuscript in which John described the businesses in St. Johns in the 1936-1990 time period. Here, slightly edited, is how he remembered the west side of the first block of Clinton Avenue:

The first business at the head of Clinton Street was occupied by Fred Baker and his son, Herb, a restaurant where you could buy coffee and a donut for 16 cents; lunches priced at 25 cents--this was for a hot-beef sandwich and coffee. The second floor was occupied by Dr. Porter, a doctor of optometry, where you could have your eyes examined and purchase a new pair of glasses for $7.

Next door to Baker's restaurant was Durkee's Exclusive Ladies Hat Shop owned and operated by sisters, Sue and Mabel Durkee.

Then came John Harley's Second-Hand Shop. The front of this shop looked like it was built in 1870. The inside of this business was cluttered up with stacks of used items such as second-hand chairs, etc., piled on top of each other with a narrow aisle about twenty inches wide to get to the back of the store where there was a heating stove for burning chunks of cut cordwood which was piled up not far from the store front. Outside was a stairway so you could walk down to more second-hand merchandise in basement.

Next door was the newly-built Clinton Theatre owned and built by Ray and Bill Beechler in 1934. Inside of theatre was approximately 80 feet wide & 100 feet deep. Tickets were selling for 10 cents-children and 25 cents--adults. The Clinton Theatre had a beautiful marquee out front. The only other theater in St. Johns was the Star Theatre located in the Miller-Jones Shoe Store when the Clinton Theater opened. (Margin note: Star Theatre sign was in the basement - seen in about 1955-1960.) On the south front side of the theatre building was an exclusive ladies' ready-to wear business owned by Mrs. Glen Tupper. On the north front side of the theatre was Parker & Son Barber Shop (haircuts--25 cents).

Next to theatre was the J. C. Penney Store building now [ca 1990] owned by Brandon White. Upstairs were four offices, one being Dr. Russell Kraft a well-known dentist. Later, his father-in-law, also a dentist, joined him. Dr. John Grassle, an optometrist, examined eyes and fitted glasses.

Then came the Hafner 5 & 10 Cent Store, later vacated to another dime store and later still, Nu Vision Optical Store.

Next was the J. A. Byerly Grocery Store, a Michigan chain headquartered in Owosso. Each morning during the "in season" they displayed most of their vegetables on the sidewalk in front of store. John "Hap" Ahern was the manager and he was followed by Paul Buehler.

The Miller-Jones Shoe Store was next to the north, one of a chain carrying low-priced to medium-priced shoes. The manager of the store, which closed down about the early 1960's, was Frank Valyer.

Next came as the Millman Drug Store owned and operated by Harold Millman.

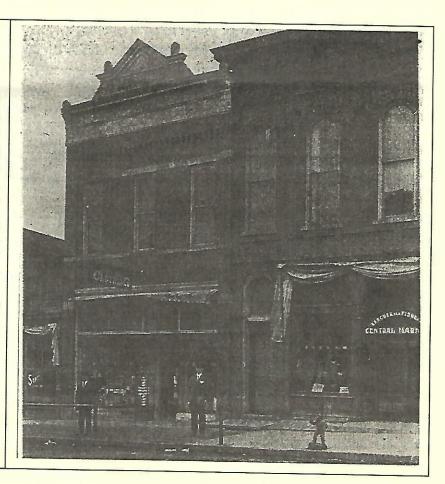

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Grocery Store (A & P), where Rocky Maynard was manager, stood next door. Don Gilson and Don Britten were the employees. This store had their various cereals [store brands] of which there were about six varieties, oatmeal and cornflakes being number one. When you ordered cereal, the employees would reach for a wood, 5-foot pole with a clamp on end to take the cereal box down from the upper shelf. Employees waited on customers; dill pickles in wooden barrel; Frankenmuth yellow cheese cut and priced per lb. Half of the grocery items were behind counters and. After you got what you wanted, the items were added up by hand on a receipt. Coffee in the 30's was mostly ground fine or medium by a special coffee grinder in the store or you could take home the coffee beans, which came in a wax-lined bag, where you could grind your own coffee. [Laundry] soaps were mostly in flakes; Fels Naptha was the popular bar soap; no liquid soaps.

Below the A&P was an outside stairway facing Walker Street which housed the Howard Streeter Barber Shop. Gerald Irrer started working for Howard about 1939 or 1940.

Note: Rehmann goes on to cover the rest of Clinton Avenue and some side streets. The complete transcript of his story, which he called, The Biography of Downtown St. Johns, Michigan, from the Past to the Present, 1936-1990, is on file at the Archives of the CCHS.

1956 Centennial – Clinton Co. Republican News

43 Years Ago - It was back in 1913 that Kuhns & Merrill were in the men's clothing business on the east side of the center block of Clinton Avenue. Standing in front of the establishment are the two owners, Norman Kuhns and Robert J. Merrill. The building now occupied by the Becker Appliance Store. At right was Central market, operated by Karcher and Fishburn. That building was destroyed by fire in December of 1946 and re-built by Rehmann's into their present modern clothing store. Shown at left is a portion of the frame building which is now Irrer's Barber Shop. At the time of the picture was taken it housed a restaurant operated by Peter Eiseler. Mr. Eiseler's daughter, Mrs. Agnes Roberts, is now a cook at Matthews Dairy store on Clinton Avenue.

HELLO CENTRAL. GIVE ME EUREKA:

The following was edited from the 1921 Clinton Telephone Company Directory, a copy of which is held at the Archives of the Clinton County Historical Society. This directory lists the phone numbers for both St. Johns and Eureka subscribers.

CLINTON TELEPHONE COMPANY

105 ½ West Higham St. St. Johns, Michigan September 1921

Leslie G. Brown, President and Manager C. L. Shafley, Vice President Henry Lindsey, Secretary-Treasurer

Board of Directors

Henry Lindsey D.R. Sturgis

J. C. McPrangle Charles Bishop C. W. Halsey Charles Travis

E. I. Hull C. L. Shafley E. E. Sturgis Leslie G. Brown

Two trunk lines are maintained between St. Johns and Eureka at considerable expense from which the Company receives no revenue. The use of these lines is free to our subscribers; to others the charge is ten cents for each five minutes. If this free service is to be continued, we must insist on subscribers keeping their conversations within the time limit. If you wish to make several calls in succession, so advise the operator. She can then give you special attention. You expect a prompt answer from Central. You should, therefore, be equally prompt in answering your own signal. Do not lay anything on top of your telephone. Many long drives have been made to remove shears, mouth-organs, button-hooks, alarm clocks, etc. Do not allow anyone to listen on the line when it is in use or to play with the telephone at any time.

Party Line Courtesy: Answer only your own signals. When you wish to use the line, remove the receiver from the hook and listen. If you hear no conversation, say "hello" once or twice to test the line. If you get no response the line is ready for your use. If parties are talking, immediately restore the receiver to its place and wait until they ring off. This company reserves the right to interrupt the parties using the line at the expiration of five minutes, if necessary.

Rural Subscribers: To ring Central, push the button on the left side of the telephone, turning the crank at the same time. If the operator gets your signal, she will answer at once. If in ringing for Central the crank turns very easily, you may know that the operator did not get your signal showing to you also that someone before you has been talking and failed to ring off, thus leaving the two lines connected through the switchboard. If you experience any trouble in getting Central the first, or at most, the second time, you may overcome the difficulty by ringing one long ring without using the button. Do not ring Central several times in rapid succession. It is always unnecessary, is very nerve-racking to a busy operator, and nearly always delays the service. Many times does an operator get to your signal just as you are ringing the second time. She must keep someone else waiting while you finish ringing or leave your call to answer another. This is useless delay.

It is the object of the Company to have its operators become as expert as it is possible to be. Yet, they are not automatic machines. They are human beings and subject to mistakes like others. Will you please give them this consideration?

HAROLD GOULD FLUCKE

26 May 1895 - 9 March 1970

Harold Gould Flucke was born in St. Johns, the son of Artemus Eckart & F. Lorena (Gould) Flucke. In 1904, he moved with his family to Ovid where his father was employed by the Grand Trunk Railway as a ticket agent. The 1914 Ovid High School graduate served in WW I and then went on to earn his living as a commercial artist. In 1923 his application for a passport states that he is an artist and intends to travel to France, Holland, and Germany to study. He married Frances J. Urban on Jan 26, 1924, in Detroit. The Fluckes continued to live in the Detroit area and Harold died in Farmington.

Some of Flucke's original paintings and periodical pages of his cartoon-style advertising art can be found for sale on e-bay.com. Among the products he drew ads for were Chevrolet autos, Kelvinator air conditioners, AC spark plugs, and Eureka vacuums.

The centennial issue (June 1969) of the Ovid-Elsie Banner featured some of the full-length caricatures of Ovid businessmen and other citizens which Flucke drew while in high school. He also wrote humorous rhymes to accompany the drawings. Those whom he depicted were:

Arthur B. Acre, Recycled Sports Equipment Dealer William P. Atkins, Bookkeeper Howard S. Barker, Soda Fountain D. K. Barrus, Shoe Store Edward D. Beebe, Druggist George A. Davis, Livery Stable Marshall S. Duncan, Hotel Employee Albert Groat, Blacksmith William J. Hathaway, Grocer A. G. Hunter, Humorist Aden J. Lewis, Shoe Salesman H. D. Loree, Grocer Fred M. Losey, Livestock Dealer Frank A. Marshall, Constable Frank P. Meehan, Irish Musician John W. Mentor, Policeman A. T. Parrish, M.D. William R. Shaw Byron V. Soule, Lawyer Alfred I. Squire, Grocer

J. W. Stoody, Poultry Feed Salesman Lou T. Storrer, Men's Clothier Benjamin B. Tucker Lester E. Tucker, Piano Salesman Custer Waltz, Pastime Movie Theatre Lloyd Webb, Butcher William G. White, Expressman

Dr. A. T. Parrish

The doctor is a busy man His life with work abounds. We hardly see how he finds time To make his daily rounds. His is the Officer of Health— To him our thanks we give For keeping Ovid neat and clean, A healthful place to life The doctor is a hunter, too, And yearly goes up north With all his guns and knives & things To drive the Roe-buck forth He loves his little garden spot, He's fond of chickens, too, (We mean by "chickens", poultry For no other kind would do.) He has a little motor car With which he scoots about This speedy means of getting 'round He could not do without.

Marshall S. Duncan

Who doesn't know Marsh Duncan?
He's a man you often meet,
Either standing in the hotel door
Or sweeping off the street.

He's a little hard of hearing, But his eye is clear and bright; And he'll stand upon the railroad track Until the train's in sight.

Then he hustles for the depot For he has to meet the train, And lead the unsuspecting ones To Ovid's "Pontchartrain."

But you've got to hand it to him,
When you try to find a man.
Who can find more ways to save a cent
Than Mr. Duncan can.

William P. Atkins
A man of affairs is our William,
A man with an intellect keen;
A fellow with polish and culture
And possessed of strategic mien.

Discreetly he meets all the patients
And beckons them sit down and wait;
Says, "Doc will be in, in a minute,"
Though he knows he will be an hour late

Bill's shark at the book-keeping business
And writes witty stuff with his pen
A Man most congenial and clever
To meet in office of den.

The Archives Update ...

We have been busy with regular business at the Archives plus getting ready for the CCHS Potluck on June 22. (See this newsletter for details.) At the potluck I will be talking about the new Oral Histories webpage we have added. It includes audio interviews that were done in the 1970's. So please check it out. And Myrna will be talking about the Early Settler Certificates. We hope to see you on the 22nd!!

An ancestor asked, "Could someone please send me the name and address of the people who live in the house across the road from the XXX cemetery? I would like to contact them about plugging in a series of extension cords to their electrical power--needed to bore two small holes into the cement of the marker to fasten the flag holder onto the marker."
